Copyright and License Agreement

1. Author(s) and/or their employer(s) and/or their funder(s) shall retain copyright over their work.

2. Author(s) and/or their employer(s) and/or their funder(s) shall grant ALT permission to publish the work in Research in Learning Technology – The Journal of the Association for Learning Technology.

3. The licence under which permission is granted is a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 Unported (CC BY 4.0) License[1]

4. This licence has no adverse effect on the author(s) moral rights to be credited as the author(s) of the article.

5. In submitting this article for publication in Research in Learning Technology - The Journal of the Association for Learning Technology, the author(s) warrant(s) that the submitted work is original, and that neither the submitted article nor any illustration or supplementary material, or any part thereof, are in any way in violation of any existing original or derivative copyright.

6. In submitting this article for publication in Research in Learning Technology - The Journal of the Association for Learning Technology, the authors must disclose any interests that might impair the credibility of the article in their cover letter to the Editor, which may be uploaded at the same time as the manuscript.

7. In submitting this article for publication in Research in Learning Technology - The Journal of the Association for Learning Technology, the author(s) indemnify and hold harmless ALT and The Publisher as to warranties and representations of the author's ownership, originality, or similar breaches. Such indemnification shall survive the termination of any related contract, as well as to all related claims.

By selecting the "I agree" checkbox and submitting an article to the system, including any comments to the Editor(s) in the covering letter, the author(s) agree to the terms of this Copyright and Licence Agreement, which will apply to the submitted article if and when it is published in Research in Learning Technology – The Journal of the Association for Learning Technology.
